At Hymen's Altar*ALLIN-SCHILLING

At the Methodist Parsonage, on Thursday afternoon, Nov. 11th, by the Rev. E. T. Scragg, Herbert Wesley Allin to Miss Sarah Louise Schilling, both of Lacombe.

The young couple above referred to have a host of friends who wish them a long, pleasant, and profitable journey along life's pathway.

They were married towards the close of the afternoon hours, after which they, together with the minister and his wife, went to the home of the groom's sister, Miss A. E. Allin, Alberta Street, where the wedding supper was partaken of by a few of their most intimate friends. The table was heavily laden with all that is tempting to the appetite.

The second layer of the wedding cake was reserved for the second sitting, and much merriment was caused during the eating of the same, a different article being in each different piece, such as money, a button, a ring, a thimble, and so on. After all had done justice to the tempting repast an adjournment was made to the parlor, where, in conversation, singing, etc., a very enjoyable evening was spent.

The groom's gift to the bride was a diamond ring.

Having installed an Electric Machine for taking Photos at night, we are prepared to make appointments for evening. Call and see our samples. B. S. Cameron Photo Studio, Lacombe.

Ponoka News

A box social will be held in the Magic school house on Friday evening, the 19th. An attractive programme will be rendered.

The local teachers attended the convention in Edmonton. They had a very profitable meeting, and return to their duties overwhelmed with new ideas.

The Dixie Jubilee Concert Co. will be in the Empress Theatre on Monday evening, November 22nd. There should be a crowded house, as they are well worth hearing.

An important sale of furniture takes place in town on Saturday, the 20th, when R. M. Whitecotton will dispose of the effects belonging to H. J. McVicker.

R. P. Bell is doing some carpenter work for E. C. Case, on his farm, south-east of Ponoka. He is erecting a large barn and otherwise fixing up the out-buildings.

The party who took a 22 rifle out of the hen-coop behind the Revelstoke lumber yard is requested to hand same to Constable Nielson.

Rev. F. W. Bateman was greatly appreciated on a recent Sunday in town and at East-side. As a result of his stirring appeal $200 was subscribed to the General Missionary Society of the Methodist Church.

The Rev. R. W. W. Alexander has just returned from another big trip west, in which he visited one of the settlements close to Rocky Rapids, on the Saskatchewan, where probably, when the war is over, a power-house and dam will be built to provide Edmonton city with hydro-electric power. There is a settlement already there on the other side of the river named Power House, consisting of several farms and a post office.

Quartermaster Sergeant J. W. Woodhall, late of the 4th Battalion, "The Buffs," East Kent Regiment, has been instructed to endeavor to obtain the names of twenty-five men desirous of enlisting for the Canadian Overseas Expeditionary Forces, under the country village billeting system, whereby all men enlisted in country villages will be billeted and trained in that village during the forthcoming winter. The rate of pay to be equal to that being paid to men enlisting in the cities. Any men desirous of joining please hand their names in to J. W. Woodhall.

Snow appeared on November 7th last year, and stayed throughout, so that there is but little difference this year from last. However, let winter come, everything is ready for the siege. The fall plowing done is about up to the average, threshing practically finished, and with plenty food garnered for the stock, the farmer will have something of a respite from his arduous labors. The young folks will have a gay season, dances, socials, and entertainments, which will chase away any terrors of the long winter evenings.

Stettler News

The bar of the Dominion hotel has been closed up, pending the observance of certain regulations which the authorities claim have been ignored.

In past years people have been fishing through the ice at Buffalo

Lake without a license. The authorities are looking after the matter this year, and people following the practice should obtain a license and not run any risk.

A number of fires have occurred along the C. P. R. from Lacombe to Castor, owing to the fact that the railway company has been burning the right of way without plowing sufficient fire guards. These cases have been referred to the railway commission for a decision.

The action of the council in giving free current for verandah lights is a step in the right direction as such lights, and in illuminating the streets and are a matter of convenience to many people besides the owners of the houses. Strangers in town during the evening can reach their destination on the residential streets much easier when the verandahs are illuminated.

Pete Peterson, who lives next to the Gillbank place, a couple of miles north of town, had an unpleasant experience last Sunday when he had his pipe shot out of his mouth while looking for a colt in the fields. Mr. Peterson was about 100 rods from the road, when a bullet from a passing auto cut the bowl of the pipe he was smoking completely in two. He was too far away to see the number on the car, but thinks that the bullet must have come from a 30 rifle. Another serious feature of the case was that Mr. Peterson had reason to believe that a colt of his which had been missing for a couple of days had also been shot at, and he was out looking for it at the time the bullet nearly got him. He found the colt a short time afterwards in the brush, having apparently been shot by a 22. The colt was a valuable one and was one and a half years old. Cases such as the above are getting altogether too frequent, and are a source of much danger to the farmers of the district. One good example of a careless shooter brought to justice would work wonders for the future.

Free Wheat

From one end of Canada to the other thought has centered upon the question of getting our wheat to the American market. The question has two aspects. One is the principle involved in the practice of free trading, and the other is the incidents connected with the practice.

On the face of it one would hardly think that same men could find any objection to our interrupted trade in a wholesome commodity like wheat. It seems incredible that people can find an objection to the principle of liberty of trade in wheat between Canada and the States. Yet there is a large element in this country who seem to think that by denying ourselves the advanages of the American market we develop a commercial independence and fortitude which it is claimed is good for us. Discussion upon the principle involved in selling grain on the highest market is, however, usually dropped for consideration of the incidents of the trade.

In this department of thought there may be offered seeds of evidence pro and con. One can take a certain fact and draw a false conclusion from it, then go on from this to prove almost anything. A fertile imagination can conceive of. Keeping the identity of our wheat seems to be the great bugaboo, just as, if we sold certificates of grade to be manipulated and depreciated when we sell our wheat to be ground. Also there is endless discussion over the point as to whether the difference in price between and Minneapolis will disappear with the removal of the duty. Some advocates of free wheat claim our prices will rise to the American level, while opponents claim that the American prices will sink to the Canadian level. As boys most of us have, dammed small streams, and so created two water levels, then have broken down the dam and have seen the high water level fall and the low level rise, and on the whole the stream flow more evenly. This is exactly what would happen were the tariff on wheat removed, chiefly would wheat flow to market more smoothly.

Spreading Money

Although we believe that every farm in Alberta and Saskatchewan is for sale this fall just as in the recent past, there is at the same time more indifference to the prospect of a sale. For in spite of the big expense of handling this year's crop there is a greater degree of satisfaction with its results than is usually the case. Farmers frankly tell us it has been a good year and the greater degree of contentment with condition augurs well for the development of the industry.

Nor is there so much of a desire to use money and credit for things outside the farm such as winter trips or investments in rosy schemes in cities or distant lands. We observe a stronger tendency to use the wealth produced to improve the living conditions on the farm, and certainly this is a most commendable thing to do. There is scarcely a farm that cannot be made a more desirable place to live at an investment that will return dividends in dollars and comfort. We have not yet reached the stage where farm improvement can be classed as luxuries. And in making these improvements there should be a care that they are not too ostentatious, that is, that all the available money be not spent on one department whether it be the house or stable or field. Many an excellent woman has been made a permanent enemy of farm life because every cent she earned was invested in outdoor machinery or stables or fences, while to a lesser extent good farmers have given up in despair of ever being able to meet the demands of an exacting wife.

Unfortunately there is no definite rule to follow in the division of the proceeds of the labor of the farm family but too frequently the good nature and weaker will of the women concedes more than is due the men. The equitable distribution of the family revenue is the key to the solution of the problem of keeping young people on the land and of various other problems in connection with rural development.

NOTICE

Do you wish to keep your boy or girl at home, busy and interested? If so, music will be a fine hobby; for instance, the violin. It is the king of all instruments; its melodies bring back long forgotten memories. Perhaps you have forgotten last week's notice of this, so this week's notice is likely to bring back memories of the previous notice, though that notice was different from this notice. However, do not allow this notice to escape your notice, or you may never see another notice exactly like this notice. Notice also that this notice is an original notice, and not a copied notice of some other notice. Notice, likewise, that this notice is here just to remind you to notice another notice in next week's notice, which will be somewhat shorter than this notice, but which notice will be to call to your notice, exactly as does this notice, that Mrs. Rose Greve (please notice) is, we still notice, busy teaching the above instrument mentioned in this notice. Her pupils soon attract notice, and later get press notice. Notice her notice in another column of this week's paper.

ST. CYPRIAN'S CHURCH.

Sunday, Nov. 21st.
Services at 11 a.m. and 7 p.m.
Sunday School, 12.30 p.m.

Special meeting of the W. A. at the home of the President on Thursday, the 18th, at 3 p.m.

Sunday last was "World's Temperance Sunday," and the subject of the sermon at St. Cyprian's was that of Temperance and Purity. The text was I. Cor. 12: 24, "God hath tempered the body together." The old exploded theory in medicine, which taught that there were four humours in the human body, which, when existing in proper proportion, gave a happy and equable frame, still survives in the expression "good temper."

The preacher contended that any over emphasis or abuse of any appetite or function of the body was intemperance, and when one part suffered the whole body suffered. The thought was applied—as Paul applied it—to the Church as a whole, the Body of Christ; to society in general, and to the individual. After speaking of the importance of temperance, and so far as intoxicating drinks were concerned, the preacher thought that there was great need for the exercise of temperance in the matter of food, dress, and amusements. In conclusion, the fact was emphasized that the remedy lay mainly in the child, and the following points were mentioned in that connection:—First, the need for sober and pure parentage; give the child a start. Secondly, the need for careful but accurate teaching on such subjects in the home and the school. Thirdly, the love and service of God; the most purifying and ennobling factors the world knows.

Many children in the critical period of school life, labor under disadvantages that a little care and attention could easily remove.

A dislike for books often originates in the extra effort to read them. Likewise often an appearance of stupidity and inattention may be due to eye strain.

Squint or cross eyes is usually the result of eye strain, which properly adjusted glasses usually cure. Three-quarters of the headaches come from the same cause, and will yield to the same remedy.

The Huns are Weary Of the Great War

New York, Nov. 16.—(Herald)—An American newspaperman in Berlin, writing to a newspaper here, reports that Germany is weary, very weary of the war.

"How long does America think the war will last?"

"I said I did not know. This question of the duration of the war is the most frequent I have heard during the past two weeks. It is on everybody's lips; among shopkeepers, you hear it, among waiters and among the middle class, and particularly the lower class, among private and non-commissioned officers, and occasionally even among officers of rank and reputation. A year ago the slogan was 'Germany will win' today the cry is everywhere, 'How long will this thing last?'"

He declares that the German people are dissatisfied with the Zeppelin attacks on London. I have been surprised at the frankness with which some of them have spoken of the split in German opinion, in which the foreign office, on one side, backed by many professors and doctors—the intellectual element—is pitted against the naval department.

For some time back the former had doubted the value of the latter's submarine and aerial policy, not so much on humanitarian grounds, but because it was considered that the damage inflicted on England was not worth the criticism evoked from neutrals.

As one of my informants put it:

"If we could wipe out all of London it would be worth while, in spite of getting into war with the United States. But killing 125 people and damaging Liverpool street station is not enough. After each submarine or aerial attack we have to face the criticism of American newspapers, headed by a clever English press campaign. And yet the American people scarcely hear of atrocities against Germany, such as the English-French raid over Stuttgart, where so many women and children were killed."

Mr. Green tells of a railway journey on a train with soldiers. "They discussed various subjects, and occasionally, but rather quietly, the war. Last year, under similar circumstances, a carload of German travellers would have filled the air with vitriolic arguments, the rights of Germany, the treachery of England, the fact that Russia's mobilization started the war, that France would have come through Belgium if Germany had not, that the Fatherland was united to a man, would fight till England's back was broken, and so forth and so on."

"A year ago such groups were bustling, bristling, full of fight, and full of hate; today they are resigned, calm, tolerant. Since then I have listened to the crowds in restaurants, in the streets, and at the barracks at Spandau Hof. And I have talked to many individuals. They discuss the war. They no longer argue, quarrel and rave."

"Today Germany is like a feverish patient to whom the leech has been applied—the war mania whose blood has been drained."

I worked for some time trying to get the proper figures of this blood-letting.

I found the answer on the walls and corridors and written in the files of the war office just around the corner from the Neue Wilhelmstrasse. Here the casualty lists have been compiled up to October 2. By the newspapers, which are not much more than official bulletins, there is little said about the extent of losses, and the war office neither calculates nor encourages their calculation. In fact, copying and republishing the lists in German papers is strictly forbidden. But for this benefit of friends and relatives the names of individual dead, wounded, and missing are systematically and honestly posted each day during severe fighting.

The German casualties for the single week ending October 1 were 61,955.

In other words, 61,955 German citizens, or more than 8,850 a day, have been killed, wounded, or taken prisoner during that seven days of Russian warfare. Since it takes a week or more for the reports from the front to compile the reports from the front, these figures can have no symbolic, too, of the Teutonic connection with the recent great war. It is a century fight along the western front, or to behind the times—typical where, during the renewed Franco-German offensive it is said the losses were three times greater than any similar period of the war.

The seven days from September 23 to 30, inclusive, were not above the average of the last two months. I took the figures, because they were the latest and the most easily available. On each column were 120 names. This column was published, covering the period from Oct. 2 to Nov. 2, inclusive. In this period the Prussian losses amounted to 78,376, or, and dead. On September 30 there were 73 columns of names, making a total of 8,640 losses. Of September 29 there were 60 columns, giving 7,200 names; and the losses for the other days of the week, figured in the same way, were as follows: September 28, 9,000; September 27, 8,625; September 26, no list posted; September 25, 11,080; September 24, 8,810; September 23, 8,700.

By far the greatest number of losses were sustained by the Prussians. It is reported that the Prussians alone have lost more than two million men up to this date. In all cases the Prussian, Saxon, and Bavarian losses were grouped separately. In certain instances companies, and even entire regiments were wiped out. A random example is the 3rd company of the 63rd Prussian Reserve Infantry, which lost 246 men. A company's war footing is 250. Of these 84 were fallen (killed outright), 49 severely wounded, the remainder lightly wounded. Not a man was captured.

One of the first things you do nowadays in Berlin, after having your passport stamped at police headquarters and getting a bread ticket (for every man, woman, and child is allowed to consume only so many grammes of flour per day) is to make the Von Hindenburg pilgrimage.

The huge wooden statue, which is almost the size of the Sphinx, is erected at the entrance of the Tiergarten, just past the Brandenburg gate. The circumference of the mantle is 10 yards; the face is two yards long, and the height of the figure and platform is 28 yards. In warring Germany, instead of kissing the pope's toe, you drive a nail into Von Hindenburg. For 24 cents you may tack an iron nail into his leg; for $2.40, a silver nail into his sword, and for $12 (all of which goes to the Red Cross) you may drive a golden rivet into the "Iron Man's" heart. The figure stands stonily, with legs wide apart, hands folded firmly across the hilt of the sword, whose point is in the ground, the square, immovable chin lifted high above the folds of the great coat, and the passionless grey eyes staring down Victory Alley, past and above the statues of Germany's former warrior—Friedrich der Grosse and Friedrich Wilhelm and other German heroes celebrated for the art of killing men.

Almost any afternoon, or better yet, on a holiday, when there are two brass bands, instead of one, you may see the crowds paying homage; an orderly, quiet, sober, middle-class German crowd not doing much of anything—just drawing a vast contentment and satisfaction from being at the old man's feet—perhaps staring for a few minutes at the implacable face, reading the evening bulletins from one of Germany's five fronts, or eating their Schinken and bread and waiting for the drum-major to lift his baton and play, for the fourth consecutive time, "Ein feste Burg ist unser Gott!"

Each new day that the Russians are driven back the crowd goes out to thank Von Hindenburg; when the news is bad they come to brood in the shadow of Von Hindenburg, and, if Von Tirpitz, if Mackensen, and all the rest of the German army, from the proudest general to the grimmest private, were swept off the face of the map, the crowd would nevertheless go out to the statue and say:

"We've still got Von Hindenburg!"

You try to imagine a Broadway crowd spending a half day worshipping a Shafter or a Dewey, or even a Grant. But over here you are inclined to watch them, and after a while you are drawn into the spirit of the thing yourself. And so, not because you are pro-Hindenburg, or pro-ally, or pro-anybody—it's merely a case of doing as the Romans do in Rome—you pay your mark, get your nail, climb the scaffold, and drive it just below the warrior's knee.

You could not find such a sight in any other country. It is quite remarkable and typically German, this reverence for a living idol; childish, perhaps, but it seemed to me from the reports from the front, these figures can have no symbolic, too, of the Teutonic connection with the recent great war. It is a century fight along the western front, or to behind the times—typical where, during the renewed Franco-German offensive it is said the losses were three times greater than any similar period of the war.

The seven days from September 23 to 30, inclusive, were not above the average of the last two months. I took the figures, because they were the latest and the most easily available. On each column were 120 names. This column was published, covering the period from Oct. 2 to Nov. 2, inclusive. In this period the Prussian losses amounted to 78,376, or, roughly, 21,000 more than in the previous ten lists published.

The Neue Rotterdam Courant suggests that the increase in casualties justifies the supposition that these lists are losses suffered during the great Allied offensive. The paper adds that the total Prussian losses alone amount to 2,009,454. In addition 230 Bavarian, 280 Saxon, and 293 Wurtemberg lists have been published, along with the naval lists of 55. The Courant further publishes a table giving the Prussian losses since the middle of July, from which it is seen that in the last three and a half months they lost 503,190 men from all causes.

NELLIE MCCLUNG ON THE HAWKES CASE

When Carrie Davis, in Toronto, was acquitted of the crime of murder, it marked an epoch in the extension of the unwritten law to women. Carrie Davis had undoubtedly killed the man, but the jury considered that she had good reason for so doing. She did it in defence of her honor.

Then came the case of the Smith-Bradley shooting at Peace River Crossing, where wounded affection and alienation of his wife was considered sufficient reason for one man's shooting of another. It was a popular verdict, too; an acquittal usually is. The lawyer's dramatic appeal, setting forth the divine rage of the injured husband, makes the appeal to humanity, and the general feeling was that Ralph Smith got what was coming to him.

Now comes the case of Mrs. Jennie Hawkes, who shot and killed the woman who alienated her husband's affection. It seems from newspaper accounts, to have been a case of great aggravation. Mr. Hawkes brought his new love right into his home and paraded his affection for her before his wife's eyes, threatening her with immediate death if she objected. She had the constant insult of the hated woman's presence. She also overheard the plot to get rid of her, quietly and unobtrusively by putting her in an asylum, and also the setting aside of the other woman's husband, a general clean-up of all obstacles.

She says she did not know what she was doing. Rage and jealousy took possession of her, and her hatred of the other woman drove her to commit the crime.

The jury brought in a verdict of guilty, with a recommendation of mercy, but the judge decided to act only on the verdict, and use his own judgment as to the mercy, so he condemned her to be hanged. What about that "divine romantic rage" which got Bradley safely through and furnished a motive for his crime which exonerated him from blame. Why does it not come into the case of Jennie Hawkes?

If over a human being had reason for desperate action, surely she had. Her home was invaded, her honor insulted openly, and without the slightest attempt at concealment. There was no law to protect her, for a man may bring his mistress into his home, and so long as he does not show physical cruelty to his wife, she need not appeal to the law. Mental cruelty, outraged affection, or insult does not count. He has to bleed her nose or black her eyes before the law judges him guilty of an offence, although outraged affection, when suffered by a man, is recognized in the unwritten law as a sufficient motive for murder.

Jennie Hawkes took the law into her own hands. Mad with rage, she shot the woman who had broken her heart and violated her home, and the judge says she must die!

The inference is that a woman has no recourse in a case of this kind. She must remember that she is her husband's chattel, and if he decides that he is tired of her and wants another, she must bow in submission. No doubt it has been her own fault, she should have made herself more attractive.

The unwritten law, according to this judge, does not apply to women and he proposes to make an example of Jennie Hawkes, and in this sentence of death he hands a grave and solemn warning to all married women to remember that they must not get notions in their heads that they have any exclusive right to their husband's affection, and the power to enforce it.

If a man wishes to withdraw his affection from his wife and bestow it on another woman, this judge, at least, has done his best to see that it can be done without any unpleasantness to the man or the second lady. He will not tolerate the wife making a row about it. She has to remember her place.

Now, it will be interesting to see whether the women of Canada will submit quietly to this ruling.

The judge has shown himself to be a chivalrous protector of his own sex. I wonder if there isn't a little bit of chivalry among women, too, that will show itself at this time.

I do not think Jennie Hawkes should receive a pardon on the ground that she is a woman. If and the judge says she must die—Nellie L. McClung.

(and do) receive the full penalty, but as a human being she is entitled to a square deal. The man who caused the trouble, who violated his marriage vows, who broke her heart and caused a peaceful woman to become so embittered and enraged as to commit murder, goes free! He killed her soul, but the law takes no notice of that. Mr. Hawkes is quite within the law. Mrs. Hawkes is on the outside and the judge says she must die—Nellie L. McClung.

THE SABBATH AND THE SEVENTH DAY

(Contributed by Rev. H. Young, Morningside, Alta.)

This is a day when Christian people are drawing nearer together and understanding one another better. It seems unfortunate that especially with regard to one of the great commandments there should be any serious disagreement. We have the heartiest sympathy with Seventh Day people insofar as they are seeking to point men to Christ and to a new life, but we feel that our position on the Sabbath question is being misunderstood, if not misrepresented, and unnecessary friction caused. In an article in the Lacombe Globe some time ago Prof. Adams seeks to show how the Sabbath came to be changed from the last day of the week to the first. He starts with the time of Constantine. One of his own quotations is sufficient to refute all his arguments. It is this: "The first day of the week, which was the ordinary and stated time for the public assemblies of the Christians, was, in consequence of a peculiar law enacted by Constantine, observed with greater solemnity than it had formerly been."—Mosheim, Eccl. History.

So, less than two and a half centuries after the time of the apostles the first day was regularly kept as the Christian Sabbath. Nothing is given to show when, or how before this time the change was made. We know, however, that the disciples met in the time of the apostles on the first day of the week. In the last book of the Bible we read that John was in the spirit on the Lord's Day, and Prof. Adams admits that the first day of the week was called the Lord's Day before the time of Constantine.

Let us now look at the command itself. It does not say the seventh day of the week is the Sabbath, and we must not add to the scripture record. It says the 7th is the Sabbath, and the 7th day in scripture is not equivalent to the 7th day of the week. For example, in Num. 31:24, there is a command to wash clothes on the seventh day. It is not the 7th day of the week. It all depends on where you start to count. The Divine record in Genesis starts with the creation, the six days of labor and then the day of rest. The Jews often referred to the days of the month, and on certain days of the month they had Sabbaths. The Sabbath to them did not mean the 7th day of the week. It meant a day of rest. The Jews have no difficulty about the day today. As soon as they acknowledge Christ and become Christians they keep the Christian Sabbath.

I sometimes think that we do not take some of the Christ's teaching as literally as we might, but at the same time a great deal of harm is done by a too literal and formal interpretation of isolated passages, and not interpreting scripture by scripture. In the ten commandments we read: "Thou shalt not make unto thee any graven image or any likeness, etc." There are people who believe that this forbids having one's picture taken. Again, we read: "Six days shalt thou labor and do all they work." There are those who believe it wrong to take a holiday or rest any other day but on the Sabbath. Again it says: "The 7th is the Sabbath." Must we change it to the 7th day of the week, and hold to a formal interpretation? The same method is seen with regard to the New Testament. We find people taking the 10th chapter of Matthew and starting a little sect, and saying that because Christ on that occasion sent disciples on a short tour two and two we must always go that way. It seems not so matter that on the same occasion they were told not to go to the Gentiles, but to the Israelites; that they were not to wear shoes; that none of them were women, etc. No wonder Christ said: "The letter killeth, but the Spirit giveth life."

What is the fundamental idea of the Sabbath? It is rest; the rest and refreshing which man's whole being needs. The Sabbath was made for man, to minister to his needs. The God who made us, and sustains us, knows those needs. We need nightly rest, and the sun is hidden from view. We may neglect it for a time, but it is at our peril. We need the weekly rest, and the Sabbath is given. We may neglect, but sooner or later we suffer.

France once tried one day in ten, but it did not succeed, and had to be abandoned. God knew the right proportion, and he said one in seven. But rest is not idleness. We are not prepared to live strong, noble, fruitful lives the rest of the week by a Sabbath of idleness. "Forsake not the assembling of yourselves together as the manner of some is." We must get in touch with the great realities. We must come to know God. There must be thought, meditation, communion, study of his word. The Sabbath is the great bulwark of our civilization. I have preached to men who had no Sabbath. I have heard the confession, "My first step downward was when I commenced to work on Sunday." We disregard the Sabbath at our great peril, but when it is kept holy it brings a true blessing into our lives.

WHAT FATE DOES

It is odd, how some men have to be practically kicked into their proper places by fate, says a writer in the Calgary Herald. Men will cling to mist jobs for life rather than make the break of their own accord that would mean prosperity and happiness for them. And sometimes a seemingly unkind fate will step in and take the whole business out of their hands.

The writer recalls the case of an acquaintance who worked for years in a silverplate factory at an ordinary wage, marrying and getting a family of small children. Business went bad and he was let out. For a month or two he was nearly crazed at the hopelessness of his prospects. Then a friend paid his fare to a United States city, where he was offered a job in another silverplate factory. Six months later a little invention of his came to the notice of the management which took it over, paying the inventor a royalty and making him superintendent of the works. If he had not been thrown out of his other job he would have grubbed along there for life.

Another case in point was that of a young Toronto youth who thought he would like to become a railroad man. His application was in for a job as fireman, and the day his arm was shot off while out hunting he had a call to go to work. But the arm was off and he couldn't. Later he went back to school, graduated with honors and is now a highly-paid college professor. But he had to lose his arm to get started right.

DISASTROUS FIRE IN PLANT OF BETHLEHEM STEEL CO. IMMENSE LOSS

South Bethlehem, Pa., Nov. 10.—The fire which virtually destroyed the No. 4 machine shop of the Bethlehem Steel Co. here, today, was finally extinguished this afternoon, after causing damage unofficially estimated at from $1,000,000 to $4,000,000. The company has not yet issued any statement as to the loss.

South Bethlehem, Pa., Nov. 10.—Fire early today almost completely destroyed the No. 4 machine shop of the Bethlehem Steel Co. Only the skeleton of the building is standing. Machinery and war material in the building was said to be worth millions of dollars.

How the fire started is not known. It was discovered in what is known as the boring mill section of the plant among a quantity of oil. The fire spread rapidly and soon the entire building was in flames. The fire department of the steel plant was called into action, as well as the departments from four neighboring towns, but their efforts were mainly devoted to saving adjoining property.

The value of the guns alone in the shop is said to be several million dollars. There were about 1,000 machines of different kinds in the building running from lathes, shapers and drills on down to boring machines. These machines were worth from $400 to several thousand dollars each, and it is estimated that the value of the machinery was several millions of dollars.

The burned shop was 250 feet wide, 700 feet long, and four stories high. On these floors 2,250 men were employed in day and night shifts. In the neighborhood of 800 men were at work when the fire started, and so rapidly did it spread that some employees had to make their escape by means of ropes from the different floors.

From workmen it was learned that the fire started among oil near the entrance to the plant. This oil flows in conduits, and is used to gather up flying chips which escape in the operation of gun boring. There was only a spark of fire at first when some workmen started to put it out by throwing on water. Then followed a mighty flash and up leaped a flame as high as the structure, which seemed at once to envelop the whole of the big building.

The fire started on the south side of the building and soon ate its way through the structure on the north side. Floor after floor, loaded with machinery, collapsed and fell to the first floor, where it lay in a jumbled mass.

As far as is known, there was no loss of life. The fire probably will burn all day.

Some heavy losses are many of the employees, who lost all their tools, several having as much as $100 worth in the building.

Recently the burned building was rebuilt and expanded and equipped at a cost said to be three million dollars. It was given over to the manufacture of guns of various calibre for the United States, England, and her allies, and some 800 of these guns were in process of manufacture when the fire broke out. The fire is said to have resulted from a short circuit of electric wires, which ignited oil in one of the smaller boring mills.

TRENTON PLANT IS DESTROYED BY FIRE

Trenton, N. J., Nov. 11.—Fire which started in the new rope mill of John Roebling's Sons Company early today had already destroyed the building an hour later. The fire is still raging and firemen are working to prevent it from spreading. The origin of the fire could not be learned. The company was engaged in the manufacture of large orders for chains and barbed wire for the entente allies, and the plant was running night and day.

"I suffered from Kidney Trouble for several years, and tried numerous remedies and doctors' prescriptions without permanent relief, my case being chronic. After seeing about Gin Pills, and as it is a well known fact that Juniper, without alcohol, is excellent for the kidneys, I decided to try Gin Pills. One single pill gave me great relief. I have now taken four boxes of Gin Pills and find myself completely cured. No more bad humor—increased weight—clear eyes—fresh color—more strength and vigor. This is what Gin Pills have done for me."

BRITISH MALES OF WAR AGE MUST SHOW PASSPORTS

Liverpool, Nov. 9.—Following the refusal of the White Star liner to ship able-bodied Irish emigrants the American line is considering the subject and will issue a statement soon. The American line has booked 2,000 passengers, mostly men of military age, for the next two sailings of its ships. (The home office has issued an order that male British subjects, aged from 19 years upward wishing to book passage must apply to the foreign office for passports. The order is effective immediately.)

It was stated in a protest meeting in Liverpool today that passage money for Irish emigrants was being paid by German-Americans, Germans and German sympathizers.

BAR SOLDIERS FROM ALL LIQUOR STORES

Toronto, Nov. 10.—The Ontario license board has received from Col. Logie, military commander in the 2nd military division, notice that a military order has been posted placing liquor stores entirely "out of bounds" to soldiers, and prohibiting them from entering hotel bars, except from 5 p.m. until 8 p.m. This order affects all soldiers in the second division, which includes Toronto and thirteen counties.

Chairman Flavell, of the license board, has instructed the secretary of the board to send notice to the liquor inspectors throughout the division of the inauguration of the military order, which will become effective November 11, when there expires a regulation enforced when the soldiers were moving into winter quarters, from the Niagara camp, and which prohibited the men from entering either hotels or liquor stores.

Doffing the khaki will not enable a soldier to evade the order putting all liquor stores and bars until 5 p.m. out of bounds. The first order referred to "soldiers in uniform." This was altered today by the addition of the words, "and out of uniform."

Don't fail to attend the Red Cross Concert at Brookley on Friday evening, Nov. 19th. Lacombe talent will assist.

THREE THOUSAND CHAUFFEURS WANTED

Montreal, Nov. 10.—Three thousand chauffeurs is to be the contribution from Canada to the imperial forces at the front. Brig. Gen. Wilson, commandant in the Montreal district, has received notification from Ottawa from the quartermaster-general of the Canadian army, that the call has come from the British war office for 3,000 mechanical transport drivers for service with the imperial forces during the war. Enrollment in the Montreal district will commence at once.

LORD DERBY GIVES STRONG INTIMATION OF CONSCRIPTION

London, Nov. 11.—A strong intimation of compulsion at an early date is contained in a statement tonight by the Earl of Derby, director of recruiting. "This statement," he said, "Lord Derby declares, with the authority of the prime minister. It says: 'If young men medically fit and not indispensable in any business of national importance or any business conducted for the general good of the community, do not come forward voluntarily before November 30, the government will, after that date, take the necessary steps to redeem the pledge made on November 2nd.'"

On the date referred to, Premier Asquith announced in the house of commons that if young men did not come forward voluntarily and enlist, "other compulsory means would be taken before married men were called upon to fill their engagement to serve."

Lord Derby adds: "Whether a man is indispensable or not to his business will be decided, not by the man or his employer, but by competent authorities and tribunals which are being set up to consider such cases."

WILL NOT REPLY TO ALL CRITICISM

London, Nov. 11.—During the course of debate in the House of Commons today A. J. Balfour, first lord of the admiralty, laid down the principle that he would not reply to criticisms on the conduct of the war, on the ground that "all criticism of the conduct of the war must, until after the war is over, and indeed long after, be a matter almost impossible to deal with because the facts are not and cannot be known."

NO REASON AT ALL FOR ANY FAINT-HEARTEDNESS

London, Nov. 11.—Earl St. Aldwyn, former chancellor of the exchequer, during the debate on the necessity for greater economy which was resumed this evening in the house of lords, declared that whatever the financial requirements were, they would be met. "He believed the country would find the money, and that there was no reason for faint-heartedness in these matters, giving the fact of the nation's cause to rejoice, but the government was bound to exercise far more than it had yet exercised the means of economizing at its disposal. The Earl protested against delay in raising new taxation for war. Large as the increases which had been made, he said, Airdrie, being the purchaser.

they were not large enough, especially in regard to indirect taxation.

PURE-BRED CATTLE BRING BIG PRICES

The record price in Alberta for an eleven months old calf was paid at the combination Short-horn sale at the Victoria Park, Calgary, Thursday, when the gross result of the sale of 80 head of pure-breds was $12,800. Choice stock from the herds of Hon. Duncan Marshall, minister of agriculture, Olds, of the C.P.R., and Yule & Bowes, of Strathmore, was under the hammer, and the popular calf to create the record was Hannah Lee 3rd, owned by Yule & Bowes. It fetched $400, Mr. McLennan, of Lacombe, being the purchaser.

The stock was scattered well over the western provinces, among the principal buyers being Leadleys, of Winnipeg; Phillips of Armstrong, B.C.; David Car-gill, of Persons, Alberta; Fred Coburn of Gull Lake, Sask., and M. Kinniburgh, of Airdrie.

In all upwards of 80 head were offered, and sold at an average of $160. Some seven bulls averaged $201 each. The next prices in the sale were two bulls at $300 each. Two heifers at $270 and $260 respectively, and one cow at $230, all contributed by the noted breeders, Yule & Bowes. The C.P.R. sold a five months old bull calf for $195.

AN APPEAL

During the next two or three weeks every farmer throughout the Lacombe District will be canvassed for a subscription to the Canadian Patriotic Fund. The towns are all being canvassed now, and the committees will extend the work into the country districts within a few days. A little explanation in advance will make it possible for the farmers to give this important matter the earnest consideration that it deserves so that they may decide before they are called upon what their contributions ought to be.

This is not a charity appeal. It is a plain matter of duty that confronts every citizen of this country. No British subject can possibly escape his accepted responsibility to support the Empire to which he has sworn allegiance. The village and town people have responded more generously than any one dared to hope. It now remains for the farmers to show equal generosity and an equal appreciation of the value of British institutions and British liberty.

The farmers are recognized as the most prosperous class of people in Canada today. Town and city people are burdened with taxes and their property has shrunk to a mere fraction of its former value. In spite of everything town and city folks have subscribed with a generosity that is both admirable and astonishing. If the farmers of the Lacombe constituency do their duty in the way that they can well afford to do it we shall exceed the amount which we set out to raise by a wide margin. If they fail we may still reach the amount, but it will be raised almost entirely in the towns, and the wealthiest and most numerous class in our community will have failed in the supreme test. The farmers cannot afford to let this happen. They live far apart and, as winter is upon us, a thorough house-to-house canvass will be very difficult, but every farmer who desires to stand four square with his fellowmen and to discharge the most sacred duty that he has ever been asked to perform will not wait to be canvassed, but will volunteer his assistance to an extent that bears some relation to his prosperity and to the liberty and security he has enjoyed under the British flag.

Make no mistake. This is not mere hot air. The eyes of every man in this country today are resting upon the shirkers wherever they are. This fund might be raised by taxation, but the system of voluntary contributions has been preferred. That system is on trial. Every man has the opportunity of proving his citizenship, and the man who is known to be prosperous and who crawls out, whether he lives in town or country, will find it difficult to retain the respect and confidence of his fellowmen.

A GREAT SALE

Saturday was a red letter day in the history of Saleford in Lacombe. To watch the crowds thronging the 'New Clothing Store' at the Big Sale they were forced to put on owing to their being forced to raise money quickly, made one think that Lacombe was a miniature New York.

So great was the crowd at times that the management were forced to close the doors at intervals to serve the record crowds inside.

There was only one reason, and one reason only, for such a rush, and that was the really low, almost unbelievable, prices put on the goods.

Their complete stock was thrown at the mercy of the public, nothing was reserved, everything was marked in plain figures.

Advertising will surely accomplish what you want, but only when you advertise the truth in plain language. That is what they did.

The management, in order to further stimulate the buying public, and keep the Sale at a red heat, are putting on more and yet greater bargains every day.

A word to the wise is sufficient. Be there. It's to your advantage not to miss this great event.

Spring Valley News

As usual, in Spring Valley, the School-House was crowded last Friday evening by attendants at the chicken supper given by the Ladies Aid. The plan followed this year of setting tables from five until eight o'clock, has proved a great success, and will surely be followed again instead of the old plan of having a lap supper. After the lunch reports of the Church, Sunday School, and Literary Society, were listened to, after which a short programme was given. We are all hoping to enjoy another supper of the same nature again next year.

The first meeting of the Literary Society will be held in the School-House on Wednesday evening, Nov. 24th. Lunch will be served after the entertainment. All are cordially invited to attend, and a good attendance is expected. Everyone is hoping to be thrashed some day with a machine.

Arbordale News

The Helping Hand Society will meet with Mrs. Capt. Gatsell on Wednesday evening, November 24th.

A TREAT IN STORE

The Red Cross Society, of Brooksley, will hold a grand concert in the School-House on Friday, November 19th, at 8 p.m. sharp. As this concert is for the benefit of a very deserving object everyone should show their sympathy by attending the same.

The artists taking part are all well-known in local dramatics, both in Lacombe and Brooksley. Mr. S. Bird is among the number from Lacombe taking part.

The admission fee is within reach of all—50c. for adults, and 25c. for children.

***** A BIT OF GERMAN HUMOR *****

(New York World)
They need something to hearten them up a bit and excite their risibles in London, and so we respectfully suggest that the dispatch from the World's Berlin correspondent describing a visit to the German fleet be widely distributed in England.

"Do you think the British fleet will ever come out?" is the question that everybody on board, "from coal-passers to the highest officers," asked of the correspondent. The German fleet, it appears, is waiting for a challenge. Why does not Great Britain "throw the glove in the naval arena for Germany to pick up?"

The ships on which this delightful segment of German public opinion was found are, as sung as bugs in a rug under the guns of Wilhelmshaven. They are protected by mainland fortifications, by mines in the sea, and by the outlying fortress of Heligoland. They are as secure as a cave-dweller, and designed, so.

Many things have happened while these ships have held this comfortable berth. The British fleet has come out sufficiently to control the seven seas. Aside from a few submarines there is not a German ship about anywhere except in neutral harbors and in heavily protected German waters. Men-of-war and merchantmen alike have disappeared, while British flags, commercial and naval, are seen as frequently as in peace in every ocean.

With nearly all its colonies in the hands of the enemy, and its great high-sea fleet held helplessly a prisoner in its own harbors, Germany may fairly be asked what kind of comic opera challenge it is awaiting.

Only thirty-two more shopping days before Christmas. Why not pick your articles now while the Christmas "stocks" are at their best and have the articles laid away for you?

AN ECHO FROM THE FRONT

To A Mother
Are they praying for us at home? Are they meeting together in prayer? Or going on still in the old way, As they did when I was there? We thank them for all their money, We thank them for all their care, But, oh! just tell them, dear mother, We are needing so much more prayer.

Will you ask them to gather together, To meet at our Father's Throne, That we may be kept from faltering, When we feel we are standing alone? There are moments when courage fails us, When dangers around us start, Oh! tell them again, dear Mother, We are needing so much more prayer.

Surely their voices must touch us As they echo from over the seas, And call us away from our pleasures To help them on bended knees. We are sending them money and clothes, And seeking their burdens to share— But, oh! let our meetings be crowded When meeting together in prayer.

Don't forget the United, Intercession Service this (Wednesday) evening in the Methodist Church at 8 o'clock.
